MBD 9: CERTIFICATE OF INDEPENDENT BID DETERMINATION

- 1 This Municipal Bidding Document (MBD) must form part of all bids¹ invited.
- 2 Section 4 (1) (b) (iii) of the Competition Act No. 89 of 1998, as amended, prohibits an agreement between, or concerted practice by, firms, or a decision by an association of firms, if it is between parties in a horizontal relationship and if it involves collusive bidding (or bid rigging).² Collusive bidding is a pe se prohibition meaning that it cannot be justified under any grounds.
- 3 Municipal Supply Regulation 38 (1) prescribes that a supply chain management policy must provide measures for the combating of abuse of the supply chain management system, and must enable the accounting officer, among others, to:
 - a. take all reasonable steps to prevent such abuse;
 - b. reject the bid of any bidder if that bidder or any of its directors has abused the supply chain management system of the municipality or municipal entity or has committed any improper conduct in relation to such system; and
 - c. cancel a contract awarded to a person if the person committed any corrupt or fraudulent act during the bidding process or the execution of the contract.
- 4 This MBD serves as a certificate of declaration that would be used by institutions to ensure that, when bids are considered, reasonable steps are taken to prevent any form of bid-rigging.
- 5 In order to give effect to the above, the attached Certificate of Bid Determination (MBD 9) must be completed and submitted with the bid:

² Bid rigging (or collusive bidding) occurs when businesses, that would otherwise be expected to compete, secretly conspire to raise prices or lower the quality of goods and / or services for purchasers who wish to acquire goods and / or services through a bidding process. Bid rigging is, therefore, an agreement between competitors not to compete

21.5 Upon any delay beyond the delivery period in the case of a goods contract, the purchaser shall, without cancelling the contract, be entitled to purchase goods of a similar quality and up to the same quantity in substitution of the goods not supplied in conformity with the contract and to return any goods delivered later at the supplier's expense and risk, or to cancel the contract and buy such goods as may be required to complete the contract and without prejudice to his other rights, be entitled to claim damages from the supplier.

TERMS OF REFERENCE/ SPECIFICATIONS

1.1 SCOPE OF WORK

These Service Providers are expected to DEVELOP, MAINTAIN (for 12 months) and successfully LAUNCH Yarona Mobile Application for three major platforms. This Mobile Application for the Bus Rapid Transport System's (Yarona Rustenburg Bus) Marketing & Communications Unit will help in leveraging and building a positive image, engagement and involvement around commuting the RRT project amongst all stakeholder groups and to build a positive reputation for the Yarona Rustenburg Bus brand and services. This service provider will be building an interactive Mobile Application for the commuters, easing frustrations and assisting with customer care call centre inundation of calls of inquiries.

A mobile application, or "App" for short, is a piece of application software developed specifically for use on mobile devices like smartphones and tablets. Mobile applications often provide users with services that are analogous to those accessed on personal computers. Typically, apps are standalone software components that do not perform a wide range of tasks. This trend towards using mobile applications was pioneered by Apple Inc. and its App Store, which provides access to tens of thousands of programmes designed specifically for the iPhone, iPad, and iPod Touch.

Mobile apps are a departure from the unified software environments often found on personal computers. Each app, whether a game, calculator, or mobile web browser, instead delivers a single, specific purpose. Although early mobile applications might not have supported multitasking due to constrained technology, this feature is today seen as desirable as it gives users more control over the capabilities of their devices.

The most basic mobile apps are simply adapted versions of popular desktop programmes. The increasing sophistication of mobile apps makes this method seem inadequate. Developing in a way that takes use of the constraints of the mobile environment as well as its strengths is a more advanced strategy. area-based apps, for instance, are designed for mobile from the bottom up since the user is not confined to a single physical area, as they would be on a desktop computer.

Native applications and web apps are the two primary types of apps available today. Native apps are designed specifically for a mobile OS, such as iOS or Android. Native apps typically undergo a considerably more stringent development and quality testing process before they are published, resulting in superior performance and a more finely tuned user interface (UI).

The need for an efficient public transit system in Rustenburg has arisen in response to the city's burgeoning population. Starting with Tlhabane in August 2022, the Rustenburg Rapid Transport system expanded to include Geelhoutpark, Tlhabane West, Rustenburg North, and the Central Business District. Because of the dramatic increase in the city's population, traffic congestion has been a major problem in recent years. Authorities in the city tried a number of different approaches to alleviate traffic congestion, including building new roads, expanding existing roads, installing traffic lights, and re-establishing other forms of transportation within the city. After the Department of Transport granted the Integrated Public Transport Network (IPTN) to thirteen municipalities, including Rustenburg (known as Yarona Rustenburg), the Rustenburg Local Municipality established the Rustenburg Rapid Transport to demonstrate its commitment to the project.

Passengers reaped tangible benefits from IPTN, including shorter commutes and higher reliability compared to other forms of public transport and fewer accidents on the road because to the system's designated lanes for buses. Despite these advantages, there are still transport problems with the IPTN, such as long wait times when booking tickets, a lack of smart cards, an inability to check card balances via mobile devices, and an absence of mobile top-up options. Consequently, Yarona Rustenburg proposes a software technology strategy that would enable riders to check their balances, make requests for specific bus stops and view the estimated times of arrival for such buses.

SCOPE OF WORK

WHAT IS MOBILE APPLICATION?

Just what does it mean when someone says "Mobile App"? A mobile application, or app for short, is a piece of application software developed specifically for use on mobile devices like smartphones and tablets. Oftentimes, the purpose of a mobile app is to provide a service that is otherwise only available on a personal computer.

A GROWING NUMBER OF PEOPLE ARE USING THEIR MOBILE DEVICES TO CONNECT TO THE WEB

Mobile app creation is a novel way to reach a massive audience, thanks to the increasing number of people using smartphones and tablets to access the Internet. It has been estimated by the Pew Research Internet Project that almost two-thirds of all smartphone owners in the United States use their devices to access the Internet every day. By 2017, new research predicted that there would be 200 billion app downloads, resulting in mobile app sales of 63.5 billion US Dollars. The extraordinary surge in sales of mobile devices like smartphones and tablets is to thank for these results.

The number of mobile apps installed has skyrocketed alongside the meteoric rise in the sale of smartphones and tablets. According to the Pew Research Internet Project, almost half of all smartphone owners have downloaded mobile applications, with roughly two-thirds of those people making frequent use of their apps. These numbers demonstrate the extraordinary potential for mobile applications to reach a brand-new consumer demographic—one that is permanently plugged into the Internet and the worldwide marketplace.

To put it simply, with a mobile app, one has access to millions of potential new clients. Create a successful app, and then sit back and enjoy the fruits of one's effort.

The Most Important Advantages of Mobile Applications for Companies

The production and dissemination of a mobile app has several positive outcomes. The following are some of the most significant advantages for companies in a wide range of sectors.

Build Loyalty

When it comes to retail, mobile applications have shown to significantly enhance client loyalty.

Reinforce the Brand

Mobile applications have a one-of-a-kind chance to promote a brand in a different setting. Customers are enticed to download the branded software for free on their mobile devices so they may tailor the experience to their needs.

Increase your Visibility

More than 50 billion apps were downloaded from the Apple store in 2013.

Increase your Accessibility

Users of portable electronic devices like smartphones and tablets are often on the move and may not have time to log in to a mobile website. Also, the goal of these mobile sites is not process management but rather readability and ease of use. With the use of mobile applications, users may quickly and easily have access to the data, resources, and procedures they require, whenever and wherever they may be.

Increase Sell-through

In contrast to the time spent on the company's mobile website, customers spend significantly more time with the company's mobile app, according to recent research.

It should come as no surprise that mobile applications are at the heart of the current developmental drive as technology continues to transform into a mobile-centric culture. Creating a mobile app for any business may do wonders for reaching new audiences and paving the path for continued success.

IS THERE A WIDE RANGE OF MOBILE APPLICATIONS? WHICH ONE WILL IT BE, ANYWAY?

Types of Mobile Apps

RUSTENBURG LOCAL MUNICIPALITY

RLM/DRT/0004/2023/24 - APPOINTMENT OF A WEB DEVELOPER FOR THE DEVELOPMENT, MAINTENANCE AND UPDATE OF YARONA RUSTENBURG'S MOBILE APPLICATION FOR ALL THREE MAJOR APP APPLICATIONS.

Apps for mobile devices can be broken down into three broad categories based on the coding language they employ:

- Native programmes are developed exclusively for a single OS (Operating System).
- Web applications, or "web apps," are mobile-friendly websites that may be accessed from any device or operating system by way of a web browser.
- Hybrid applications include features from both native and web apps but are packaged in the familiar form of a native app, so that they can be found in the app store and used by a dedicated icon.

Native Apps

Apps that are "native" to a mobile platform are optimised for that platform (OS). To that end, one may develop apps that run natively on platforms like Android and iOS, as well as on Windows, Mac, and Linux. Blackberry apps, for example, cannot be used on a Windows phone or a device running Apple's iOS.

Native applications may be written in a wide variety of languages. The programming languages Java, Kotlin, Python, Swift, Objective-C, C++, and React are just a few examples.

Native applications have the benefit of being quicker and more dependable in terms of performance because of their narrow focus. In comparison to other forms of mobile apps, they make better use of the device's resources. Native apps take advantage of the device's original user interface, which results in a better overall product for the end user.

Since they communicate directly with the device's hardware, native apps may take advantage of a variety of its functions, including the internet, the camera, the contacts in the phonebook, and even near field communication (NFC).

However, the drawback to creating native applications is that one will have to repeat their work across many platforms. One platform's code is incompatible with another's. Inevitably, this leads to higher prices. There's also the time and energy invested in keeping the codebase fresh and up-to-date across all versions.

The user must always re-download the programme and re-install it whenever there is an update. The storage space available on a mobile device is limited, therefore native programmes must be carefully curated.

Web Apps

Web applications look and feel like native apps, but one uses their mobile web browser to access them. They do not have to be downloaded and installed separately as regular programmes do. They are, in fact, responsive websites, whose user interface changes depending on the user's device. When you "install" a web app, it usually only saves the website's URL as a bookmark on a device.

A progressive web app (PWA) is a type of website application that functions similarly to a native app but is executed within a web browser. HTML5, CSS, JavaScript, Ruby, and other web-centric programming languages are utilised in the creation of online applications.

The benefits of being web-based include not having to adapt it to a certain operating system or platform. The price of development is reduced as a result.

More importantly, there is no download required. They don't need to be downloaded to your device as a native app does, and updates may be pushed to it instantly from the cloud. There is no need for users to go to the app store and get the update.

But there is a downside to using a web app, and it is important to note: web apps can only work in the browser installed on the user's device. Users may have different experiences depending on the browser they use.

Due to their nature as website "skeletons," they also have limited functionality while not connected to the internet. Devices with offline modes still require an active internet connection for data backup, data provision, and screen refreshment.

Hybrid Apps

In addition, there exist hybrid applications. These websites have the appearance and feel of a native app, but are actually web-based. While they may have certain native-app characteristics, such as an icon in the home screen, responsive design, speed, and the ability to work offline, they are, in fact, web apps that have been styled to resemble native.

Hybrid apps combine web development with native application programming interfaces (APIs). They are built with languages like Ionic, Objective C, Swift, HTML5, and others.

One advantage of developing a hybrid app rather to a native app is the time and money savings. Thus, a hybrid app might serve as the MVP, or minimum viable product, to demonstrate the marketability of a native software. They offer a consistent user experience and load quickly, making them suitable for use in countries with slower internet connections. Lastly, they employ a single code base, which reduces the amount of code that needs to be maintained.

The disadvantages of hybrid apps include a possible inability to match the performance of native apps. In recent years, the business of creating mobile applications has taken off.
